New Learning Forums: Deaf and Hard of Hearing

Through their ongoing access to DCO's online learning programs, distress and crisis call responders across the DCO membership continue to add to their knowledge and enhance their ability to support helpline callers and chat and text visitors. This month, Learning Forums adds an interesting focus on hearing loss to its online bank of learning videos. Along with the physical aspects of the condition, hearing loss can significantly encumber both the social and emotional lives of those affected.

Volunteer Rights

Volunteers make up a vast volunteer workforce and important resource that can sometimes be overlooked - or undervalued - by organizations that rely on them to do jobs not done by paid staff. The operative word being "jobs", an important term for any business or charity that engages volunteers because there are legal requirements and protections that deal specifically with volunteer rights.

What Are Canadian Donors Thinking?

Early in 2017, more than 8,000 active Canadian donors shared their views on philanthropy with Cygnus, a research-based fundraising consulting firm that serves the not-for-profit sector. They found that donors are narrowing their giving choices, they are more confident about what they want from charities they support, and they are also ready to give more. Yet, about one in three Canadians held their philanthropy back last year.

Big Data Part One: Twitter Analysis of Work Stress and Emotion

For many years, DCO and its member centres have collected aggregate and non-individually specific information on the issues, concerns, demographics and outcomes of the over 302,000+ callers they respond to each year.

We feel that looking at the psychosocial health of the communities we serve is both helpful and insightful information. As this article and its companion piece next month will illustrate, researchers and public health professionals are often searching for and utilizing new methods of insights into the psychosocial health of our communities.

News from our Member Centres

The Board of Directors of Distress Centre Halton (Oakville) is very pleased to announce that Janice Gardner-Spice will be joining the Centre as Executive Director effective May 29, 2017.

Janice comes to us with extensive experience in not-for-profit management, and has worked for Niagara Region, Easter Seals, and Meals-on-Wheels. Janice is also an instructor at a community college, and has program development experience at the grassroots and regional levels. Her talents for engaging and motivating people to a cause, establishing key partnerships, and delivering sensitive, effective, service will be great assets to the centre and to the community.

Please email us to share your centre's news and upcoming events in e-News & Views.
